

EDGE Club announces competition winners

ETSU's Student ACM SIGGRAPH Chapter (the EDGE Club) recently held its annual digital art show and juried competition. The EDGE Club Art Show features artwork by students created in the past academic year.

Winning Best in Show and Best in Photography this year was Quanuquanei Karmue for his digitally recolored portrait of his grandmother. Craig Lewis received the award for Best in Digital Illustration for his piece "Truck in Field." Cobalt Cox was awarded Best in Graphic Design for his movie poster design "Counterpart II." Anna Seaver received Best in Animation for her "Kisses Have Feelings Too." Patrick Rawles won Best in 3D Modeling and Rendering for his piece "Beach by the House." Joel Gerlach won both Best in Interactive Design and Best in Video Production for his "Deep Space" and "Breakfast."

The EDGE Club is a student-run organization for digital artists and designers on ETSU's campus.

Through social events, the Fragocity™ LAN party, volunteer work, an annual art show, trips to design firms, and speakers from the industry, the EDGE Club strives to create an environment in which students can grow creatively, artistically and professionally.

Quanuquanei Karmue won Best in Show and Best in Photography for this digitally recolored portrait of his grandmother.

ETSU Accent: Volume 57, No. 16, June 5, 2009