What You Should about Tuition and Fees in 2010-11

What is the tuition at ETSU in 2010-11?
Starting this fall, ETSU and all other Tennessee Board of Regents institutions will charge tuition for each credit hour of class a student takes, with significant discounts for credit hours taken over a certain amount. Undergraduate students will pay $201 for each of the first 12 credit hours of classes taken. With the discount, each additional hour of class will cost $30. Graduate students will pay $324 for each of the first 10 credit hours of class; each additional hour will cost $49.

What other fees will students pay in 2010-11?
In addition to tuition, students will pay ETSU’s program and service fee. The fee is based on the number of credit hours in which a student is enrolled and is capped at $499.50. It includes activity, technology access, postal services, graduation, drop/add, CPA, debt service, international education and, and other fees. Students enrolling in certain courses or programs of study will also pay fees to cover extra costs related to these courses and programs.

How will the new tuition policy affect the lottery?
The rules governing Tennessee Education Lottery Scholarship Program are not affected by the change in the tuition structure.

How can I find out how much I will owe this fall?
You can use ETSU’s tuition estimator http://www.etsu.edu/fa/fs/bursar/tuitioninfo/tuition_estimator.aspx to determine your costs this fall based on the credit hours you take, the program and service fee, and some extra charges associated with the courses or degree program in which you enroll. The tuition estimator does not include housing, books or some specialized course fees.

Why does ETSU charge tuition this way?
The tuition structure isn’t unique to ETSU; the Tennessee Board of Regents (TBR) approved the new tuition structure at its June 19, 2009 meeting.

The new tuition structure will help ETSU and other TBR universities better manage course enrollment, and it will also benefit students. Previously students who took more than 12 credit hours of class paid nothing for the additional credit hours. This made it easy for students who signed up for more than 12 hours to drop some of those classes later, because they had paid nothing for them. Students who enrolled in courses, then dropped them, took seats that other students might have needed. Also, research shows that students who frequently drop courses—even if they later re-take them—are less likely to graduate from college. The new tuition structure encourages students to succeed in every course in which they enroll.

Is tuition going up this fall? How much?
The average tuition increase for full-time students at ETSU will be 6.7 percent. Full-time students taking 12 credit hours will see an increase of 5.2 percent. Students taking 15 credit hours will see an increase of 7.8 percent.

Why does tuition keep rising?
Through allocations of tax dollars to public universities the State of Tennessee pays part of the cost of educating each college student. For many years, however, the state contribution has steadily declined, and more and more of the cost has shifted to students and their families. In 1998-99 state allocations paid for 60% of the cost of a student’s education; in 2008-09 the state paid only 44%. From fall 2008 to fall 2009 alone, the state’s contribution to a student’s education at ETSU fell by 15%. Declining state contributions mean higher costs for students and their families. Tennessee’s lottery scholarships help some students cover part of these costs, and ETSU does everything we can to keep costs as low as possible.
