CSCI 1100 is a required proficiency for all Freshmen students. A proficiency exam or CSCI 1100 must be taken before you will be allowed to register as a sophomore. This course does not count as a UIT intensive course. A portion of this course will be taught using ETSU's distance education system. Students are required to attend class each week. Section 060 is a section for students who would like more in-class participation. It meets twice a week. Students must have a permit to enroll in this section. For permits, go to 107 Gilbreath Hall. For more information about section 060 call 439-6970 or 439-7413. Please contact the UIT office at burke@etsu.edu or 439-6970 for more information.

HIST 3950-003 Topic: In this course, we will examine the historical experience of health and illness as well as how populations responded to these experiences. We will trace various hazards to human health and how the organization of societies facilitated or mitigated the production and transmission of disease. We will also ask how populations and communities of individuals defined "health" and explore the emergence of modern institutions of public health, especially in the last one hundred years. We will cover topics, such as smallpox, malaria, AIDS, quarantine, sanitation and hygiene, vaccination, as well as race and gender in medicine. We will concentrate primarily on the modern world (i.e., 18th century onwards), but we will begin with an important survey of public health and the impact of disease in antiquity and the Middle ages. Subsequently, we will focus more exclusively on the evolution of public health and the modern health care system in the United States, with world initiatives as a comparative background.

HIST 4047/5047-001 Note: The Early Republic: Have our political leaders ever been able to "just get along?" This course will look at the Early Republic from the Constitutional Convention and Federalist Period through the War of 1812. Along with the formation of political parties, the controversial Election of 1800, and the creation of the partisan press, students will look at political controversial and contention among the nation's most prestigious leaders. Topics covered include foreign and domestic intrigue, secession and nullification as responses to policy disputes, as well as opposition to the War of 1812. Coursework includes reading secondary texts and primary sources writing historiographical and research/response/transcription essays, participating in structured debates, and completing an individual selected (topical) research project. Students are also expected to verbally participate in discussions. Regular attendance is mandatory.

HIST 4957/5957-001 Topic: In this course, we will explore the transformation of European culture and society between the last decades of the seventeenth century and the end of the eighteenth through a movement known as the Enlightenment. The Enlightenment arose from the inquires of the Scientific Revolution and spread from the intellectual centers in London and Paris throughout Europe and across the Atlantic. An examination of the Enlightenment cannot be confined to just one area of study, as enlightenment thinkers (known as philosophes) engaged a wide range of topics - from politics, economics, social customs, religion, and gender - to answer questions about the nature of humanity and human society and how to improve it. Philosophes then stressed learning, the exploration of nature, and critical examinations of the societies in which they lived. In order to get a sense of the range Enlightenment through and genres of expression, we will examine a range of primary sources from political and economic treaties to novels, satires, and plays. We will also engage with the extensive scholarship on the Enlightenment and its historical significance, from its influence on the ideology of the American and French Revolutions to modern ideas about gender roles, race, and class.
