Course Delivery Methods

	In-Person	Online – Synchronous	Online – Asynchronous	Hybrid	Remote

Description	In-person courses meet in an on-campus learning space (classroom, lab, studio, etc.) at scheduled times for the duration of the course in accordance with the ETSU schedule of classes.	Synchronous online courses meet at assigned times according to the ETSU schedule of classes and online assignment schedule determined by the instructor. Instruction occurs on the web within the ETSU learning management system or approved third-party services and is separate from in-person, on-campus course sections.	Asynchronous online courses do not have required class meetings. Instruction occurs on the web within the ETSU learning management system or approved third-party services and is separate from synchronous or on-campus course sections. Students complete assignments and activities at their convenience in compliance with the deadlines set by the instructor.	Hybrid courses combine in-person and online (synchronous or asynchronous) course delivery into one integrated experience. Courses will have 50% or more in-person instructional and/or testing components as well as scheduled online meetings, asynchronous work, or other self-directed activities. The mix of delivery methods will depend on an instructor's teaching strategies and course learning objectives.	Remote courses meet during scheduled class times according to the ETSU schedule of classes. Remote courses are a live broadcast extension of an in-person course from an on-campus learning space (classroom, lab, etc.).
