Dear Students and Alumni of the College of Public Health;

Career development, professionalism, and job preparation skills are essential for all working professionals, and those of us in, or planning on, careers in Public Health are no exception. To this end, I am very pleased to make you aware of some very important resources available to support you in your career development.

“The Monday Dose” is a monthly newsletter from the Department of Health Services Management and Policy that is distributed electronically and posted on the College website: http://www.etsu.edu/cph/MondayDose.aspx. It was designed to help students and alumni become more competitive and marketable in their future professional lives. It was begun in Spring 2012 by MPH Student Jennifer Swiatek, and currently has students Olivia Egen, Tina Nguyen, and Basil Alhassan as the main writers, with faculty from the Department of Health Services Management and Policy serving as contributing writers. Dr. Amal Khoury serves as the Editor.

You can review all previous Monday Dose editions on the website, including the most recent edition that deals with effective resume writing.

There are many other professional development services at ETSU. The College maintains a number of relevant videos and links on the Public Health Practice site: http://www.etsu.edu/cph/current/careers/default.aspx including sections on “Careers in Public Health” and a “Search Engine for Public Health Jobs.”

Alumni who are interested in being periodically notified of vacant jobs, should ask to be put on a mailing list by contacting Janet Stork at storkj@mail.etsu.edu.

Beyond the services offered by the College, job-seekers are strongly encouraged to visit University Career Services, either in person (call 423-439-4450 for an appointment) or on the web: http://www.etsu.edu/students/careers. There are a remarkably wide range of services available there. To view job opportunities on the website, simply click the BucLink logo and register.

Additionally, on Thursday, May 9 from 9:30 – noon, University Career Services is sponsoring their annual “Jump Start Your Job Search” program. This is open to students, graduates and alumni. Please RSVP careers@etsu.edu if you will be attending.

I hope that you enjoy reading the Monday Dose, and/or visiting the other career development resources of the College and the University.

Best wishes,
