Interprofessional Perspectives on Global Health (Epid 5700)*

Study Abroad: Ciudad Sandino, Nicaragua

May 11-May 29, In Nicaragua May 14-27

Course purpose: This course addresses the knowledge and skills necessary to work in interprofessional healthcare teams in a global health setting. Topical areas include defining global health and social justice, understanding unique epidemiologic challenges in global health, and health priorities.

Course Format: Lectures at ETSU prior to the study abroad trip, a trip to Nicaragua for 14 days, and lectures at ETSU following the trip.

Costs:

Graduate Tuition/ Fees ($1,641)+ Program Fees($1,723) = $3,364

Program fees include: airfare (approx. $850), Room and board (dormitory plus three meals a day, $845) and health insurance ($18).

*Open to all graduate/professional students who are interested in global health. Students should determine if this course fits their program requirements.

Final dates subject to change based on travel itinerary and flight costs

Scholarship information: http://www.etsu.edu/honors/international/abroad/scholarships/default.aspx

Instructor:
Dr. Megan Quinn
Department of Biostatistics and Epidemiology
College of Public Health
quinnm@etsu.edu