5.2. ETSU KPI and Institutional Peers

Dr. Mike Hoff gave a presentation on peer institution as also key performance indicator development. There are four types of comparison groups: Jurisdictional, Competitor, Aspirational, and Peer, which is comprised of institutions which are similar in regard to contextual factors important to a particular analysis, if not more generally. He shared a list of current ETSU peer institutions. While he considers it still to be mostly a good list, he noted that it was developed in 2014 and that we have made some improvements as an institution since then.

Dr. Hoff walked the group through the process that ETSU followed in peer institution analysis using data from IPEDS. Sixty-five institutions were selected and measured against 38 variables. Using a K Means Cluster statistical analysis, a listing of peer institutions with “highly similar” and “similar” characteristics of ETSU was generated. Dr. Hoff noted that this listing is based on data and not reputations. Moving forward, members of University Council and other ETSU committees will have the opportunity to review the list and determine which institutions would be ideal peers. Those decisions would be based on priorities that are considered important to ETSU, such as enrollment.

Dr. Hoff also presented a listing of potential categories for key performance indicators. These included enrollment, student success, post-graduation outcomes, equity and inclusion, research, faculty/staff, finance, and facilities. He also shared the key performance indicators that were presented to the board. These categories included university enrollment, research and service, stewardship of place, student success, equity and inclusion, teaching environment, and empowerment of employees. Some of these KPIs will remain in place but others will change. One KPI that is being developed is Post-Graduation Outcomes. Dr. Hoff shared post-graduate outcomes data from the Class of 2020; a highlight of this data report was that 73.5% of the Class of 2020 was working. In closing his presentation, he shared a series of next steps for the remaining of the summer related to the development of the peer institution list.

5.3. Exercise is Medicine

Dr. Brandi Eveland-Sayers and members of the Exercise is Medicine Interdisciplinary Team presented on the new Exercise is Medicine initiative, which is managed by the American College of Sports Medicine. The team shared data which showed that Tennessee ranks poorly for obesity, depression, and exercise. Mental health is also a major concern among college students. Exercise is a highly valuable treatment option for physical and mental health.

The team presented on this new program which will launch in fall 2022. Plans are to designate October as Exercise is Medicine Month at which time a number of activities will be hosted on campus. ETSU hopes to achieve bronze or silver level status by spring 2023. The program will work closely with the Basler Center for Physical Activity, which hosts a number of programs on campus throughout the year.
